ADMINISTRATIVE LAW

Johnson & Bell's Administrative Law group is adept at handling administrative law disputes, routinely advising clients sorting through the government rules and regulations that affect their professional licenses or businesses. As trial attorneys, they also handle significant amounts of administrative litigation.

Our cases include:

- Defending medical professionals' licenses before regulatory boards, including doctors, dentists, veterinarians and nurses
- Representing professional engineers and security firms
- Advising our professional clients with respect to the operation of their practices and businesses so that they are in compliance with their state's professional acts and rules
