

CLASS ACTION

Achieving client objectives — that's why companies retain Johnson & Bell to handle their class action cases. For almost 50 years, clients have relied on Johnson & Bell to achieve their desired business outcome — whether that includes getting clients out of the case at the earliest point possible or successfully defending their interests through trial and appeal. We recognize that many companies and industries continually face pending class action lawsuits, the stress of which falls hard on the owners, representatives, and employees. Our lawyers have a plethora of experience in this high-stakes litigation arena. We work closely with our clients, along with their insurers, in developing a finely-honed defense. We deliver results.

Johnson & Bell has represented automobile manufacturers, real estate management companies, banks, technology companies, food and beverage companies, mortgage companies, telemarketing agencies, health care related entities, retailers, manufacturers, municipalities, tank car companies and transportation companies in a variety of class action lawsuits, including:

- Americans with Disabilities Act
- Biometric Information Privacy Act
- Consumer Fraud Acts
- Fair Credit Reporting Act
- Fair Debt Collection Practices Act
- Fair Labor Standards Act
- Magnuson Moss Act
- Product Liability
- Telephone Consumer Protection Act
- Toxic Tort
